

Clicquot Selections: February 2025

A Legend in the Baking by Jamie Wesley

Fun romance full of strong me who bake.

Black Swan by Rebecca Roanhouse

This book made me think, even though its fantasy of the parallels to what's going on in the world right now. There's so many [points of discussion, this would be an excellent read for book clubs.

Choose Me by Sheryl Lister

Beautiful romance with a love interest who could recognize the beautiful points of the heroine even when she couldn't see them for herself. I loved it.

How Can I Help You by Laura Sims

Twisty murder mystery with a librarian serial killer. What's not to love?

Onyx Storm by Rebecca Yarros

Great continuation of the x series. Some questions were answered, and new ones introduced.
Looking forward to book 4!

Revenge of the Tipping Point by Malcolm Gladwell

Loved seeing the perspective of the tipping point 25 years later and what new observations Gladwell is able to make.

Sleep No More by Jayne Ann Krentz

First in the Lost Files series, Krentz can really do psychological romantic suspense with a paranormal twist really well!

The Lost Bookshop by Evie Woods

Magical historical fiction with dual timelines and the women who found their power within the realms and through the influence of books.

The Night Island by Jayne Ann Krentz

Book two of the lost Files series. Just as suspenseful as the first as the characters continue their quest to find out what really happened the night their lives changed forever.

The Right Sign by Nia Arthurs

Beautiful and romantic enemies-to-lovers story between a deaf young woman who said she would never date a hearing man and what he does to change her mind.

The Stolen Queen by Fiona Davis

Fiona Davis at her best. Majestic historical fiction that transports between 1936 Egypt and the Valley of Kings and 1978 NYC and the start of the Met Gala. Queen of Historical fiction, Davis seamlessly goes between the two timelines without you feeling seasick.

The Vampire of Kings Street by Asha Greyling

Interesting take on a vampire/fantasy novel with correlations of today's society with the haves and have-not, the role of class, and race at it's heart.

This Motherless Land by Nikki May

A powerful novel about family, relationships, identity, how we belong, and the ultimate question of how who we are fits into it all.

Eddie Winston is Looking for Love by Marianne Cronin

Absolutely charming stunning feel-good novel. 90 year old Eddie Winston has never been kissed when he meets and befriends 24 year old Bella she vows to change that. This story of friendship is one for the ages.
